Astrid's Arms Around Him

Astrid's Arms Around Him

Hiccup cried like a small child as he laid his body across his father's in an attempt to wrap his arms around him. Stoick's body was cold and lifeless, blasted to death by a plasma-blast by his best friend when he jumped in front of him to save him. Not caring if he got the blast instead.

That's when he felt the soft touch of Astrid's hands wrap around his arms and her hair brush up against his body in a comforting gesture. But he couldn't bear to look at her while he was in this state of mind, he couldn't bare for her to gaze into his eyes. Hiccup just couldn't let that happen out of his own reasons.

But her presence wasn't uncomfortable or wrong, in fact Hiccup wanted Astrid there by his side to help him go through this. With his anger boiling towards the actions that Toothless had made against him and his family, he needed someone there to help him through all of this.

"Shh...I'm here for you Hiccup... You'll be alright..." Astrid whispered as she nuzzled her head against his in a comforting gesture with a shaky voice. Caught in her own sadness for the lost of her Chief.

Hiccup still wouldn't look at her, but his breathing settled down and his body grew more relax to the movements of her fingers comforting him on his hand and his shoulder. Her arms around him was the best thing that he needed in this moment of silence.

Astrid's arms around him was the one of the things he needed in his moment of grief and suffering, and he was glad that she was there to help provide him comfort and the love he needed to hear and receive from anyone.

With Valka on his other side, they all grieved over the death of Stoick, with tears falling down their eyes and their hearts heavy. But Hiccup had his two most important women right beside him, so he knew that they would support him through this dark time.
